

2011 Curry Stone Design Grand Prize Winner Announced Sustainable Architecture in Post-Disaster Areas 10.4.11

Winner of the 2011 Curry Stone Design Grand Prize: Taiwanese architect Hsieh Ying-Chun

The 2011 Curry Stone Design Prize Winners were announced today with an official presentation ceremony to follow on November 7th at the Harvard Graduate School of Design. [...] Hsieh Ying-Chun is the Grand Prize Winner; he will receive $100,000 from the foundation with no strings attached. Hsieh is a leading Taiwanese architect who for over a decade has deployed his talents in rural areas decimated by natural disaster. — bustler.net

Two additional 2011 Winner Prizes, of $10,000 each, will be awarded to Atelier d'Architecture Autogérée (AAA) and FrontlineSMS.