Curry Stone Design Prizes Are Awarded

Five recipients, from Brooklyn to Ramallah in the West Bank, will share in an award devoted to the concept of design as a force for social good. The Curry Stone Foundation announced that its 2012 Curry Stone Design Prize will be distributed among the five, in honor of the fifth anniversary of the award, which celebrates design “as a critical force for improving lives and strengthening communities.” Each recipient will receive $25,000. They are the Center for Urban Pedagogy, a k a CUP of Brooklyn; the Liter of Light project (using water in bottles to create solar lamps, above) based in Manila; MASS Design of Boston; the Riwaq Center for Architectural Conservation of Ramallah; and Jeanne van Heeswijk of Rotterdam, the Netherlands.
